

BRISTOL'S OLD HOMES SUBJECT OF DORON GREEN

Travel Club Members Listen To Delightful Address

HISTORIC INCIDENTS

Local Historian Has Been Collecting Data on Such in Three Years

The old homes of Bristol, those still standing which are steeped with historic lore, and others that long ago outlived their usefulness, were given attention of 50 club women yesterday afternoon, when Doron Green told the Travel Club interesting things about earliest homes erected in the borough.

For the past three years, Mr. Green has been collecting data relative to such, and his knowledge of the older structures, especially those on Radcliffe street, was well presented, newsy bits of information being offered about many.

As a preface to his remarks, Mr. Green told of the wrong impression gained through historic accounts of members of the Society of Friends settling on either side of the Delaware in this section, a century or more ago. As is generally stated, Mr. Green told, the Friends on the Pennsylvania side of the Delaware were not of a lower strata of society, and the impression that they were uneducated is false. The historian related that the Friends settling on the New Jersey side of the river cleared their land much more quickly because pine trees were found there and with roots near the surface these were more quickly uprooted; whereas the Pennsylvania Friends had the oak, walnut, and other species, more deep-rooted to contend with. This work took much longer time, and the Friends on the opposite side of the river with land quickly cleared and settlements sooner erected could give more time to study and other cultural pursuits. "They were from the same strata of society," added Mr. Green, "these Friends on either side of the Delaware were relatives and friends, and mingled with each other. They had sprung from the same stock."

In the group of homes mentioned was that which once stood next to the Farmers National Bank, where a Mrs. Merriam conducted a school. There, according to the speaker, lived George Breck, whose brother, Samuel introduced into the legislature the resolution which has resulted in the public school system.

The home of Armand Morris was built in 1813 by a rich Philadelphian, named Head. This structure was deeded to Thomas Cooper, the English actor, after Head lost a card game to Cooper while in Europe. Cooper later built the house now occupied by Louis C. Spring for use of his children who interfered with his social engagements. One of Cooper's daughters became the bride of Robert Tyler, son of President Tyler, and the daughter born of this union unfurled the first confederate flag.

"The first home erected in Bristol, so far as can be learned," added Mr. Green, "was in 1735." This structure was located on the property now owned by Mrs. Emlen Martin and half of the property now in the possession of Mr. Green. It was built by Thomas Marriott, who owned practically all of that square. Miss Mary Rogers, stated Mr. Green, possesses a low-boy which was part of the furnishings of that first home. Miss Rogers is a descendant of the Marriott family.

"The King George, Third" or the "Delaware House" was another old building mentioned, this being erected (Continued on Page 4)

Today is Circus Day at Grand; Group of Freaks

The Grand Theatre will have an extraordinary attraction this afternoon and evening in the form of a troupe of freaks. This aggregation is none other than "Singer's Congress of Midgits and Freaks." It is called "A Night in Coney Island," and carries the well-known and original side show barker, "Doc" Sloan. He will carry the audience along with his unique way of introducing the various "wonders of the world," such as Singer's Midgits; Sweet Adeline, a fifty bit of a girl weighing 540 pounds; Fred, the armless wonder; Howard, the human lobster boy; Lentin, the only three-legged man in the world; Hadjababa, the human volcano; Albert and Albertina, a sensational half man and half woman; Ajax, the sword swallower; Slim Jim, the skinny dude; and Doctor Singer himself.

"This funny outfit will sing, dance, and entertain in a manner that can only be seen in the world-renowned Coney Island. It is an attraction that is entirely out of the ordinary and should be seen to be appreciated," adds Edward Lynn, manager of the Grand.

The feature picture is to be "China-town After Dark," with all the China-town mystery and aroma; then the latest songs on the Organogue Song Reel; and latest events of the world in the News Reel.

NEW RULES ARE TO COVER FATAL ACCIDENTS

Operators Involved May Appeal Suspension; Prompt Citation

A BOARD OF REVIEW

HARRISBURG, Jan. 9.—Two important rulings affecting motor vehicle operators who hereafter may be involved in fatal accidents were announced today by Secretary of Revenue Clyde L. King. One was the creation by Secretary King of a Board of Review to which persons whose operating privilege has been temporarily suspended because of a fatal accident may appeal the decision of the hearing inspector.

In the other he fixed a maximum time limit in which operators so involved must appear for a hearing.

These rulings are part of the program formulated by the department to place the full burden of responsibility for fatal accidents on every reckless driver. In the State, Secretary King said, he added that the maximum penalty for such accidents will be imposed where the testimony justifies such action.

The board of review will consist of Walter W. Matthews, Deputy Commissioner of Motor Vehicles; Sanford D. Beecher, legal assistant to the Secretary of Revenue, and a hearing inspector to be named by Matthews. In no case will this inspector be the one who held the first hearing.

When an appeal has been filed with the board, the person appealing will be notified of the place and date of the final hearing. The operator will be entitled to submit additional testimony to the board to show cause why the suspension should not stand. Should the board decide the suspension is to continue then an appeal to court, as provided by the vehicle code, may be made.

"In case of an accident resulting in fatal injury, Secretary King has instructed the Safety Division that the operator or operators involved must be immediately cited for a hearing. The hearing must be held as promptly as possible, but in no case later than two weeks from the date information is received by the department of the fatal accident."

Hearing inspectors and State Highway patrolmen are required to investigate all fatal accidents and gather all information necessary for the subpoenaing of witnesses and all other information necessary for hearing purposes. The hearing inspector has the authority to recommend either temporary suspension of the operating privilege or the dismissal of the case in accordance with the testimony submitted and report of the coroner's inquest, if any.

Andrew G. Solia, th. M. minister.

YOUTHFUL MURDERER WILL FACE COURT TRIAL FOR SLAYING HIS EMPLOYER; SPENDS A QUIET NIGHT IN JAIL; EATS HEARTILY; READS BOOK

DESCRIBES IN DETAIL HOW HE MURDERED BEDMINSTER FARMER AND CHANGES STORY AS TO HIS MOTIVE FOR THE CRIME

Stanley Wismer Blurs Out Denial When First Taken Into Custody by the Police—"I Did It. I might Just As Well Confess," He Finally Tells State Troopers

Stanley Wismer, 14, who confessed he shot and killed Elmer D. Bartholomew, 28, Bedminster Township, yesterday morning, has changed his story as to the motive for the crime.

The lad first told the authorities that he committed the crime so that he could get his employer's automobile and go see his mother, who was ill.

Last night as Sheriff Horace E. Gwinner was locking the lad in his cell at the county jail, Doylestown, he asked him why he had done the shooting.

"I didn't like him. I had only got $10 and a pair of shoes since last May," the boy is alleged to have told the sheriff.

"I asked him for money but he wouldn't give me any. I also asked him several times to take me to see my mother, but he wouldn't and that's another reason why I killed him."

The boy spent a comfortable night in the jail and after eating a good-sized meal, he spent the balance of the evening reading a book, as if nothing unusual had happened.

When the Wismer boy was found at his sister's home in Lansdale, he blurted out to the police:

"I didn't shoot any one. I wasn't even in the barn, and I didn't have any rifle."

The police had not told him of the murder, and his declaration convinced them the boy had committed the crime. They took him to the Doylestown police barracks and quizzed him.

The boy is rather tall for his age. He has dark hair and eyes, with pink cheeks and a complexion almost like a girl's. He failed to show any emotion during the quiz. Finally, and without being pressed by the police, he walked over to a huge open fireplace in the barracks room, sat down and summoned Trooper Reilly. To him he said:

"I did it. I might just as well confess all."

He then related the following story: "On Wednesday, I received a letter from my mother. She said she was sick, and I wanted to go and see her, but I didn't want to ask Mr. Bartholomew to take me. On Thursday, I decided I would shoot him and take his automobile so that I could go and see my mother. I got up at about 6.30 and took the .22-caliber rifle which I used all fall when I went out to tend to muskrat traps which I had set."

"I returned to the barn and went into the entryway and was scraping up some silage when Bartholomew came in. I had decided while going around the traps to wait in the barn until he came in and then shoot him and take his car. When he did come in, I was about 20 feet from the door. I didn't say anything to him and he didn't say anything to me. My rifle was standing nearby, and I raised it to my shoulder, pointed it and pulled the trigger."

"Bartholomew staggered around the entry while I took the cartridge out of the rifle. He was still staggering when I fired two more times into his body. He fell to the floor, and then I walked past him through the door."

"When I went to the wagon house where the car was, started the engine and backed the auto out. I drove down the lane past the house, but I did not know the way to Hatfield. So I went to my sister's house, where the police found me."

After signing this confession, he expressed regret over his act.

FARM BUREAU PROGRESS MADE DURING LAST YEAR

County Farm Agent Outlines Progress in His Annual Report

MUCH ACCOMPLISHED

Progress made by the Bucks County Farm Bureau, during 1931 is described in a report made public by William F. Greenawald, County Farm Agent. His report is a summary of the work accomplished and reads as follows:

"At a conference of the executive committee members from six southeastern counties in Pennsylvania, two definite suggestions were made, Mr. Greenawald said. 'The first, that more information is needed on marketing, and the second, we need more facts upon which to base our extension programs. Our year's work shows that we have made important steps on both of these suggestions.'

"The Solebury Farmers' Club has undertaken a survey. A questionnaire was mailed from the extension office to all the farmers in Solebury, Plumstead, Buckingham and Upper Merionide townships. The purpose of the questionnaire was to determine the area included in the Solebury community. The survey committee has analyzed the returned questionnaires and is securing additional information in economic conditions in their community. It is hoped that more communities will undertake similar work."

Mr. Greenawald reported on the egg auction in his annual report. This organization, known as the Bucks County Producers' Co-operative Association, was started as an egg marketing co-operative, he said. It opened its first auction sale on July 13 at Doylestown with 192 cases of eggs. The sale is held every Monday and Thursday afternoon at 1 o'clock. During the first two and one-half months there were 23 sales and 2820 cases of eggs were sold for $29,334.23. This was an increase of $1,653.11 over New York top quotation or an average of two cents per dozen. Membership in the association is limited to producers in Bucks county. Mr. Greenawald pointed out. It is the first co-operative egg market in Pennsylvania.

"The organization has opened a big need for information on producing and grading high quality eggs," Mr. Greenawald continued. "Mr. C. O. Dossin, extension poultry specialist, spent 23 days in Bucks county holding meetings and visiting members of the auction association. The result has been an increase in the percentage of high quality eggs being sold over the auction."

"The 400-bushel Potato Club has added three new members to its number and one previous member increased his previous yield. The membership is as follows:

Mr. Edwin Draber and son, Edwin, Jr., 266 Hayes street, spent a day this week in Philadelphia at the home of Mrs. Draber's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Kennedy.

VICTIM EMPLOYED AT CANBY FARM SOME YEARS AGO

Was Well Liked by Other Employees at Hulmeville Dairy Farm

WAS KNOWN AS "BART"

District Attorney to Press Case on Murder Charge, He Says

The 14-year-old lad, Stanley Wismer, farmhand, who is accused of murdering Elmer D. Bartholomew, 28, Bedminster Township, was given a preliminary hearing today before Justice of Peace W. Carlile Hobensack, at Doylestown. He was held for court on the charge of murder.

District Attorney Eastburn said that a though the boy is still a juvenile he would act to have him tried before a jury for murder.

Bartholomew was a former resident of Bensalem Township, having been employed as a herdman on the farm of Joseph P. Canby & son, near Hulmeville. He lived with his wife on the Canby farm in a new house built for his use. The man was well liked and familiarly called "Bart."

Four bullets from a .22 calibre rifle in the hands of Wismer, caused the death of his employer.

This was revealed late yesterday afternoon when Dr. John J. Sweeney, Bucks County coroner, completed his autopsy on the dead farmer. He found one bullet in the chest and three in the back of his head.

Confronted with these facts, Wismer, who earlier in the day had signed a confession, told a new story to District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn. While he did not divulge the details of the second confession, Eastburn stated that the youth remains steadfast in his motive for the crime. Wismer maintains that he shot his employer to death to get his automobile so that he might pay a visit to his sick mother.

Bartholomew's body was found by his wife when she went to the barn to find out why he had not returned home after milking the cows. She notified State Police who arrested Wismer at the home of his step-sister, Mrs. Edith W. McVan, of Lansdale, less than three hours later.

The youth's mother, Mrs. Emma Wismer, who is employed as a servant at the home of Thomas W. Rorer, at Hatfield, was prostrated when informed that her son had killed Bartholomew. When she was revived she said: "My boy had a bad fall five years ago while he was out playing on skates. He was coasting down a hill in Ambler, Pa., when he lost his balance and struck his temple on the curb. He got some bad bruises and was unconscious all night."

"I was all alone at the time and there was no telephone in the house so I could not call a doctor. He was unconscious more than 12 hours."

"Since that time my boy has had frequent spells and has acted peculiarly. This condition was observed by the Bartholomews. Mrs. Bartholomew asked me not long ago why the boy acted that way, and I told her just what I've told you."

"I've been aware of his condition for a long time, but I never had the money to go to a specialist to have the boy examined."

The prisoner was nattily dressed in an aviator's helmet, lumberjack and knickers and, except for an occasional sob, seemed unaffected by his action. After his confession he ate a hearty meal. He admitted deliberately planning to shoot his employer because he wanted to go to see his mother and "I did not want to ask Mr. Bartholomew to drive me to her."

Employment on the Bartholomew farm was secured by Wismer about a year ago, when he answered a want ad. The boy attended Sunday School and took an interest in sports such as boxing, fishing and hunting.

He said he borrowed the rifle from a friend during the hunting season.

ACCIDENT PREVENTION

Why corporations that indemnify owners of automobiles against losses arising from accidents and against theft of their cars are not as openly active in support of means of prevention as are other insurers is puzzling.

Enlightened self-interest prompts fire insurance companies to support with vigor the national movement to control losses. They are constantly educating the public, at great expense, in fire prevention. The same is true of life insurance underwriters, who reduce their losses by preaching health and hygiene among their policyholders and do a great work in disease and death prevention by encouraging periodical medical examinations.

Agencies and interests which have been doing traffic accident prevention work are entitled to the full support and cooperation of the automobile insurance companies. There are ways in which the latter can do much effective missionary work among their clients, who in the majority of traffic accidents figure either as claimant or defendant.

These corporations are by no means blind to where their interests lie. There is mutual profit in the advocacy and use of the ounce of prevention. Every increase in accidents adds to their losses, and while the prevalence of accidents encourages insurance buying it also necessitates higher rates which more than counteract that other propaganda. The best aid to the casualty insurance business today would be rate cuts, but they are impossible as long as losses continue to grow.

LEAP YEAR PROPOSALS

On this leap year question there seem to be as many different opinions as on the prohibition issue. If one seeks long enough, he will find opinions that tally with his own no matter how warped and illogical it is.

Judge Ben Lindsay says: "Expect more marriages—it's leap year!"

The man who issues more marriage licenses than any other individual in the United States says: "Expect fewer marriages—it's leap year!"

Members of a congregation in New Jersey voted overwhelmingly against leap year proposals, the women voting more than five to one against them and the men less than two to one.

"Leap year" proposals do not wait for a year divisible by four. Few marriages are not engineered by the one who accepts. But more times than not the male victims are grateful for the suggestion and the moral support. They come through the ordeal a little dazed and sometimes doubtful, but in the long run most of them are contented with the give-and-take of domestic life.

As long as the boy thinks he did the courting and proposing and the girl was glad to accept both, what does it matter who did it? Most engagements are the fruits of good teamwork with the girl calling the signals.

Some chaps feel like regular hennies, and some are required to go shopping with their wives.

SYNOPSIS

Lovely Fanchon Meredith was wanted by the San Francisco police in connection with a murder committed by her sweetheart, "Tony." Fanchon did not know he was a gunman. She escaped by airplane under the name of "Smith." Aboard is Evelyn Howard, whom Fanchon had met on a voyage from Hawaii. Evelyn is going to New York to live with her aunt, the wealthy Mrs. Carstairs, whom she never saw. The plane crashes and Fanchon is the only survivor. To get away from Tony and the past, she goes to the Carstairs home as "Evelyn." A strong bond of affection grows between Mrs. Carstairs and her "niece," Collin Carstairs, the son, is at first antagonistic because of his "cousin's" Hawaiian escapades and her self-righteous attitude when his mother offered aid, but Fanchon's sincerity overcomes his objections. They fall in love. After a happy summer at Southampton, Fanchon makes her debut in New York. Collin, though realizing their relationship is a barrier, cannot resist professing his love. Fanchon cannot acknowledge hers without revealing her identity. Later, Tony locates Fanchon and informs her that Evelyn is alive, but has lost her memory. He threatens to expose Fanchon unless she introduces him to Mrs. Carstairs as "Cesare Gili." He calls at the Carstairs home and is accepted by Mrs. Carstairs and Collin although they are skeptical of him. Fanchon has no alternative but to agree to Tony's demands that she induce Mrs. Carstairs to wear her emeralds to the Van Suydam Ball. Tony wears a Romeo costume similar to Collin's. On the way to the ball, Collin and Fanchon profess their love.

CHAPTER XXV

Collin, having engaged the supper dance with his cousin, looked for her and did not find her. He found his mother, however.

"Where's Evelyn?" he wanted to know.

Mrs. Carstairs looked up in astonishment.

"I have no idea. I thought I saw her, some time ago, leaving the room with you, Collin," she answered.

"Damn that Gili!" was Collin's unspoken exclamation, and damn his choice of a costume! He went restlessly about the room in which his mother, together with some of her friends, were playing bridge, back into the ballroom, into the conservatory, and looked on the broad stairs which were covered with whispering couples. Finally, encountering his hostess, he said, as she exclaimed at seeing him, "So you've come back... how is she?"

"I'm looking for Evelyn. I haven't gone away."

"Evelyn? But she went home some time ago, with a terrible headache. I thought she went with you. She said to tell Jennie that she mustn't on any account come home earlier, she was going straight to bed and would be looked after by her maid," Mrs. Van Suydam said, in some astonishment.

Collin thanked her and went back to his mother and told her.

"I'll go along now," he said.

"Don't," said Jennie, in the middle of the rubber, "we'll both be able to get away shortly. And you'll only upset her, if she is ill and has gone to bed. Wait until I finish this hand," she ordered.

When she had done so she rose and drew him aside. The lovely face, under the soft white hair crowned with the green shining of the emeralds, was very troubled.

"You didn't come straight here," she said. "Collin, did you say anything to upset her on the way?"

She put the jewels in a drawer, for safety until morning.

He nodded, meeting her distressed gaze frankly.

"Perhaps I did. I was going to tell you tonight."

"Then," advised Jennie, "don't follow her. Let her alone for a time. We'll go home together, after supper."

In the meantime Fanchon and Tony had arrived at the penthouse. He went upstairs with her. Jameson let them in and Tony strode past him into the living room. Jameson was old and drowsy from waiting up. The figure was very like Collin and the costume exactly alike. He was not to be blamed for thinking it was Collin.

Fanchon took off her ermine wrap and threw it over her arm.

"You can go to bed, Jameson," she said. "I'll let Mrs. Carstairs in." Jameson thanked her and vanished. She went into the living room to join Tony.

"All set?" asked Tony. She nodded, without speaking. Tony, without another word, opened the door softly to the penthouse terrace and stepped out on it, alone. The door closed.

Fanchon went to her room. She was deathly tired. Everything was over. The next hour or two would see the end. She dismissed Emma, who was waiting. "Please get me out of this costume, Emma," she asked, "and then you can go to bed. I'll take care of Mrs. Carstairs. I know you're tired," she said.

She got off the costume and slipped on a negligee. When the elderly maid had departed, murmuring her thanks, Fanchon took off the little wrap of satin and lace and put on a plain tweed dress, changing her shoes and stockings as well. Over the dress she slipped on a heavy satin robe, tailored, and buttoned it close to her throat. She went back into the living room, switched on the lights, went through to the pantry and presently arranged a coffee table in the living room with decanters, highball glasses, ice and Scotch whiskey. She put milk on the electric stove in the pantry to heat. Then she sat down and waited. There was no sound from Tony.

She had not long to wait before Collin and Mrs. Carstairs came in. Fanchon heard the elevator stop and opened the door herself.

"My dear," exclaimed Jennie softly, "Why aren't you in bed?"

"My headache's better," said Fanchon. "Here, Aunt Jennie, let me take your wrap." She laid it, a priceless affair of chinchilla, over a chair. "I let Jameson and Emma go to bed," she went on, "they were half dead. I couldn't sleep so found a book and waited. I'm going to help you out of your magnificence," she went on, "and I've mixed a drink for Collin and a very tiny one for me and heated your milk for you. I thought—we might have a party," she begged.

Through Collin's mind and that of his mother, the same thought flashed... She doesn't want to have anything said... tonight.

Mrs. Carstairs went into her room and Fanchon helped her take off the lovely costume and the jewelry. She put the jewels into a drawer, for safety until morning, and laid, with hands that shook a little, the rope of pearls, the emeralds and diamonds, stripped from neck and wrist, from hands and ears, into the big jewel case and shut the drawer upon them. From the terrace outside the living room there had come no sound.

When Mrs. Carstairs lifted the tiara from her head with a sigh of relief—"Barbaric thing, it weighs a ton," she said, and handing it to Fanchon, put on a lounging robe, after which the two women went into the living room and joined Collin, who, still in his flamboyant costume, was walking about restlessly.

"OLD GRADS" LOSE TILT PLAYED FOR CHARITY

(By Leon Schiffer)

Taking the lead in the opening minutes of the game and consistently maintaining it, the Mighty Trojan juggernaut of Bristol High handed the Alumni its second consecutive setback of the season when they met in the annual charity affair of the year, which took place last night on the local high school court. The final tot of the whistle found the Cardinal and Gray minions leading the "Old Grads" by the score of 24 to 15.

Altogether both teams were in tip-top condition, fast, and composed of good shooters, although the Trojans held the greater advantage in having a smoother offensive attack.

Pico was the high scorer of the evening with six points to his credit, while McEuen carried away all scoring laurels for the Alumni with five points to his credit.

In the preliminary game of the evening the Alumni sextet defeated Coach Diemer's filly by the score of 30 to 18.

Although the "Old Grads" had a far superior team in comparison to the Trojans, all credit for their winning must go to Glenn Still, stellar guard, and Sue Strumfels, brilliant side-center, who played a brilliant brand of basketball on the defense.

Josephine Di Lissio was the high scorer of the Trojans with 11 points to her credit, while Elinore McFadden garnered all scoring honors for the Old Grads with 17 points to her credit.

Tuesday, the Cardinal and Gray quintets and sextets play Southampton on the latter's court.

RECOVER STOLEN CAR

Bristol police were advised last night that the car of Arthur Zug, stolen from Farragut avenue at six o'clock on the night of December 5th, has been recovered in Newark, N. J. As soon as the car was reported stolen here, Chief Jones sent out a description on the teletype, and this was what led to the recovery of the vehicle yesterday.

Describes in Detail How He Murdered Farmer

"I am sorry I did it," he said. "Mrs. Bartholomew was always swell to me, and I sure am sorry I caused her any trouble. They gave me a nice Christmas, and I cannot understand what came over me to do it, but I wanted to see my mother very badly and I hated to ask him for the car."

The boy declared the Bartholomews had never had a cross word for him. He then stated that "this will be tough on mother, and I hope she don't hear about it."

The Bartholomew family bears no malice towards the boy, the father-in-law of the murdered man, stated, when told that District Attorney Eastburn had said the youngster would be tried on a murder charge.

"I hope they don't do that to the little shaver. I'm inclined to believe there is something wrong with him mentally. It seems he fell and hurt himself some time ago. I wonder if this could have affected him? He seems to become melancholy at times, and we used to try to cheer him up. It is too bad, for he seemed to be a very nice boy."

Mrs. Bartholomew said: "Although I bear him no malice, I believe such an act must have been done in wrath. I can hardly believe such a thing of Stanley, for he always was a good boy. He was polite and well-mannered. He went to Sunday School regularly, and often attended church with us. He read the best of books and was interested in things scientific. There was never any trouble between him and my husband. He had been with us for over a year, and we treated him like one of the family."

by Bessonnet, Bessonnet's son, John, built a house in 1805 on the plot of ground where Spencer's store now stands, Mill and Radcliffe streets, and this is where Lafayette was entertained.

The old brick house purchased by Dr. George T. Fox was referred to, this being erected before 1802. It once housed a Spanish ambassador, Don Ferdinand Sarmiento, who was later assassinated for political reasons. Don Ferdinand married a sister of Craig, the Philadelphia merchant. The successor of Sarmiento resided in a home next to the Bristol Presbyterian Church, which was built prior to 1790.

A portion of the house now occupied by Harry Arnold, Radcliffe street, was made of logs, continued Mr. Green, who told that this was built shortly after the Revolution. It was once occupied by the well-known Hutchinson family of Bucks County. The Runyan home was built before 1765; and the house now owned by David Landreth was started in 1800.

Building in the borough was accelerated after 1800, owing to the operation of the steam-boat, the building of the turnpike, and the fact that many wealthy Philadelphians desired residences in the country section. Mr. Green remarked. The borough limits had been extended in 1800 to Hollow Creek. Prior to that time there were but two houses on the river side of Radcliffe street.

The Keene Home was built in 1816; and the Spring residence in 1820. The son of Joseph Craig built the Farmers Bank in 1818. "The Beaver Meadow House," home of the German Consul, once stood where the Elks Home is now located.

Other numbers for the day included a brief talk on county welfare work by Dr. Mary Lehman; reading of an article regarding the workings of Communists by Mrs. Orrin Ross; and a selection by the club chorus, "Dreaming."

The program of the afternoon was directed by Miss Elizabeth Iredell. Mrs. Horace H. Burton being in charge of the business meeting.
